

Topic: Is society doing enough to deal with violent crime?

Points:

1. Banning weapons
2. Economic causes of crime
3. School education
4. Stricter punishments
5. Surveillance cameras
6. The influence of the media

Every day we see violent crimes reported in the media. In order to deal with violent crime, society as a whole must work together. The society, however, is not doing enough to ~~tackle~~ combat the problem of violent crime.

Firstly, schools ~~are tolerating~~ are to tolerant when it comes to school violence. ~~Schools are commonplace for trivial violence~~ Bullying and playground violence is commonplace in many schools. ~~Still, t~~ Teachers usually take no action towards problems between students. Without any punishment, students become aggressive. They will grow up thinking that they can do anything without any consequences. Giving stricter punishment from ~~an early childhood~~ ly age is needed so that a person can grow up to be an ethical person. Educating children about the fact that violence comes with consequences is necessary.

Secondly, there are not enough surveillance cameras in Japan. Surveillance cameras can serve as a deterrent to crime. Even after a crime is committed, the police can use the image from the surveillance camera for an effective investigation. We must take advantage of this great technology to tackle violent crimes.

In conclusion, the society is not doing enough to deal with violent crime. Schools are not teaching children the importance of consequences. Moreover, there are not enough surveillance cameras. If these two factors are corrected, I think violent crime will occur less often.

Model Essay:

On a daily basis violent crimes are reported in major news media outlets. This complex issue is one which society must work together to solve. Even so, society is not doing enough to combat the problem of violent crime and must work harder to use every means available to address this issue.

First of all, the tendency towards violent crime often begins at an early age. As such schools should play a larger role in educating children about the consequences of criminal activity. This awareness can be achieved by distributing just punishment for such serious schoolyard offences as bullying and taunting by students. By doing so, schools can instill a sense of justice in students and ward off the attitude that violent crime is permissible.

A second strategy to deter violent crimes involves the effective use of surveillance cameras. These devices placed in strategic locations can serve as an effective deterrent to criminals. Furthermore, footage recorded by such cameras can be used by police forces to conduct conclusive investigations into crimes. Such indisputable evidence will also serve to further the cause of justice in society.

To sum up my points I will say that there are a number of currently available strategies that could be implemented immediately to help to abate the growing number of violent crimes. We must employ every available resource; it is our collective social responsibility to do so.

Good points: The essay is well structured with clear introduction, body, and conclusion.

The main ideas are summarized very well at the end of each paragraph. There are only a few grammatical errors.

Bad points: This essay can be improved by varying vocabularies and sentence structures. Making good use of idioms can be very beneficial. In addition, you can use at least one example to support your thoughts. For example, including statistics about how surveillance cameras helped reduce crime would add credibility to your argument.
